UNIFORM CRIME REPORTING PROGRAM

The major source of data used to measure the trend and distribution of crime in Alaska is the Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program. Since 1976 the Department of Public Safety has been coordinating and compiling the UCR crimes reported. Under this program monthly crime index data is collected from local law enforcement agencies statewide for the purpose of measuring the level of criminal activity within the State, and transmittal of that data to the FBI for inclusion in it's annual report, Crime in the United States. At present the program is operated on a semi-manual and computerized basis. Some data is compiled off of locally generated reports while the Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) is designed to provide automated data input processing and periodic generation of statistical reports.

Eight offense categories, selected by the FBI because of their seriousness and frequency, have been defined as crime index offenses. The Crime Index is a basic measure of crime which can be used for comparing the extent of crime among cities and states of similar size. The index is simply the total number of certain offenses that occur in a given area in a given calendar period. Violent crime index offenses are: murder, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault and arson. Property crime offenses are: burglary, larceny/theft and motor vehicle theft.

For over 14 years the Department of Public Safety has administered this reporting program from a fluctuating number of voluntarily participating agencies. However, while the UCR statistics represent one of the major bases for public and political awareness of crime and are the primary source for a statistical understanding of the local and statewide crime problem, one must be aware that Part II offenses, misdemeanor cases and violations, such as petty thefts, minor assaults, domestic disturbances, protective custodies and the full range of lesser statutory crimes and ordinance violations, are not retained in the APSIN system for all agencies. Therefore, the fact that activities related to these offenses demand major commitments of manpower and time by all local law enforcement agencies is not recognized in this document. Additionally, the 1990 Crime in Alaska was compiled from UCR data submitted by only 26 of the more than 40 law enforcement agencies within Alaska. While most major cities and more than 85% of the population are represented, there are significant areas not included. Consequently, the figures presented do not provide a complete picture of all criminal activity statewide.

Being the most aggregate representation of UCR data, it is designed to convey the annual reported crime experience by showing the relative frequency of occurrence of the Index Offenses. This mode of display should not be taken to imply a regularity in the commission of the Part I Offenses; rather, it represents the annual ratio of reported crime to fixed time intervals.

The major source of data used to measure the trend and distribution of crime in Alaska is the Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program. This consists of seven offense categories that have been defined as crime index offenses by the FBI because of their seriousness and frequency. The Crime Index is a basic measure of crime which can be used for comparing the extent of crime among cities and states of similar size. The index is simply the total number of certain offenses that occur in a given area in a given calendar period. Violent crime index offenses are: murder, forcible rape, robbery, and aggravated assault. Property crime offenses are: burglary, larceny/theft and motor vehicle theft.

For over 15 years, the Department of Public Safety has been coordinating and compiling the UCR reporting program from a fluctuating number of voluntarily participating agencies. Monthly crime index data is collected from local law enforcement agencies statewide for the purpose of measuring the level of criminal activity within the state, and that data is transmitted to the FBI for inclusion in its annual report, Crime in the United States. At present the program is operated on a semi-manual and computerized basis. Some department's data is compiled off of locally generated reports while other's is submitted through the Alaska Public Safety Information Network (APSIN) which provides local data input and automated generation of statistical reports.

While the UCR statistics represent one of the major basis for public and political awareness of crime and are a primary source for a statistical understanding of the local and statewide crime problem, one must be aware that Part II offenses, some misdemeanor cases and violations, such as domestic disturbances, protective custodies and the full range of lesser statutory crimes and ordinance violations, are not retained in the APSIN system for all agencies. Therefore, the fact that activities related to these offenses demand major commitments of staff time by all law enforcement agencies is not recognized in this document. Additionally, the 1991 Crime in Alaska was compiled from UCR data submitted by only 26 of the more than 40 law enforcement agencies within Alaska. Most major cities and more than 85% of the population are represented but there are significant areas not included. Consequently, the figures presented do not provide a complete picture of all criminal activity statewide.
